Monday VINITA, I. T. September 26

PARKER AND DAVIS

If the people of Vinita are ever forced to go about the streets after nightfall with a lantern as they grope their way, it will be charged up to the people who are responsible.

Vinita people are blessed with good preach- and all the churches are ably supplied at the present, but Sunday was a red-letter day in all the churches. The visiting Baptist clergy were at their best and Vinita church goers were treated to high class preaching.

Colored American citizens in the Transvaal country complain through our Consul in that region that they are treated with great indignity by the English government, in that they are forced to ride in Jim Crow cars, and, if they crowd a white person on the street, they are thrown into the gutter. They certainly have as much claim on us as had Col. Perdicaris, the Greek, to whom we sent our best battleships and our hottest air.

EDUCATION IN THE TERRITORY.

A great many people outside the Indian Territory have an idea that to come here means to turn one's back on civilization, that this is a land barren of schools and churches, and that culture among the people is an unknown quantity. This is not entirely true. In Vinita we have a magnificent public school system. Separate schools for whites and blacks are the rule all over this territory. The whites and Indians attend the same schools, and the colored people have their own schools. In Vinita the schools are all under the supervision of one principal and paid for out of the common school fund. The government at the last congress appropriated $100,000 for public schools, and all this money goes to the rural districts where it is most needed. There 170 country district schools in the Cherokee Nation alone, but more than two-thirds of these are kept up at the expense of the tribe, but white children are admitted at a reasonable tuition when no government money is used.

Vinita has a fine college and a Catholic high school in addition to her public schools. No boy or girl is compelled to grow up in ignorance in this locality and each year sees more and better facilities. With all that has been said about the lamentable ignorance so manifest in this country, it is a fact that more money per head is spent for schools in the Cherokee Nation than in Arkansas, Tennessee, Louisiana, Georgia or either of the Carolinas. Arkansas spends $1.18 as against $1.60 in Nebraska, and Louisiana spends but fifty-one cents per head. The Indian Territory is eager to be turned loose in order that she may set the pace for all the western states in the matter of education.

The best town builders are those who never overlook an opportunity to get something for their town that will redound to its benefit.

THE SHIPSHAPE PANTRY.

Is the One Wherein Everything Is Arranged with an Eye to Order and Convenience.

The essentials of a successful kitchen department are: "Order, which is heaven's first law," "Cleanliness, which is next to godliness," and "Eternal vigilance, which is the price of success," and that time-worn adage, "A place for everything and everything in its place," is especially applicable to the kitchen and pantry, where there should be literally a particular hook drawer or definite part of a shelf for every utensil and for all articles of provisions and cooked food; these places, says Good Housekeeping, should be ample and convenient for their own articles and should be reserved exclusively for them and for nothing else. Every pantry should have a strong, roomy shelf or table that is kept distinctively as a working space and which should never be used for storage, not even for cooked foods between meals; without this shelf, the pantry is apt to assume a cluttered, helter-skelter appearance.

In order to put this plan into thorough working order, it will undoubtedly require, in each particular case, a great deal of ingenuity, real study and some outlay of time and money to provide for the multitude of articles which must be properly placed, and it will also require a certain amount of self-training thoroughly to establish the habit of living up to all its possibilities, but the results will fully justify the effort.

The articles in the pantry naturally divide into certain groups: stoveware, cooking dishes and utensils, groceries, staple articles, provisions, daily supplies and cooked foods. The different articles of each group should be kept together as far as possible and each separate article should be arranged in the most systematic and businesslike order according to its use, size or shape, and it should always be kept in mind that it requires no extra time to put an article in its proper place, provided that the place is ready for it. Therein lies the whole secret of success.

FASHIONS IN MILLINERY.

Modish Headwear from Paris Designers That Is in Vogue for the Current Season.

The Millinery Trade Review's Paris correspondent sends some alluring descriptions of fall hats on exhibition in the fashion market. She says: "Probably no color will be so frequently chosen for felt hats next winter as rich, deep murre, or golden bronze-brown, combined with nauturium shades running from warm yellow to orange. The effect is superb. No more appropriate trimming for a broad-brimmed hat of this color can be found than a golden paradise plume, and soft ribbons of the two colors to twine around the tall crown. The opaline or mother-of-pearl harmonizes so much fancied this season also find expression in wintry materials. A large hat in tulle felt of a delicious shade of pastel gray has about the crown a wide ribbon shirred in the center, and for trimmings roses and algrette, in all of which the gray is placed with palest pink and blue.

"For the production of elegant headwear the velvete will be the chief preference. Indications taken from the Paris models in the opening under review point to favor both for the mirror and the soft-faced, glove-finished manufactures. There has been to a small extent, as noticeable in several tasteful French hats, a revival in manufacture of the terry or uncut velvet, well known years ago. There is a promise also of much use of chenille-faced silk fabrics, these appearing singly as the constructive materials for rich headwear, and either as crown or brim covering in conjunction with velvet. Some of the most sumptuous of the toques and turbans seen in the recent expositions, with crown coverings of draped or shirred mirror, or glove-finished velvet, have brim covering of net hidden under rich embroidery of chenille cord. Some of the most striking of the large hats are creations of chenille braid."

Grape Pandawdy.

Line a pie-pan with paste and fill with stemmed, sweetened grapes dredged with flour. Bake for 20 minutes, then pour over the top a batter made with three eggs, one cupful each of sugar and flour, two tablespoonfuls of water, a pinch of salt, and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Put into the oven again and cook until slightly browned. Serve with cream.—Good Literature.

THE "BONE-CABIN QUARRY"

Greatest Find of Extinct Animals Ever Made in a Single Locality.

In central Wyoming, at the head of a "draw," or small valley, not far from the Medicine Bow river, lies the ruin of a small and unique building, which marks the site of the greatest "find" of extinct animals made in a single locality in any part of the world. The fortunate fossil hunter who stumbled on this site, says Henry Fairfield Osborn, in "Fossil Wonders of the West," in Century, was Mr. Walter Granger, of the American museum expedition of 1897.

In the spring of 1896, as I approached the hillock on which the ruin stands, I observed, among the beautiful flowers, the blooming cacti and the dwarf bushes of the desert, what were apparently numbers of dark-brown boulders. On closer examination, it proved that there is really not a single rock, hardly even a pebble, on this hillock; all these apparent boulders are ponderous fossils which have slowly accumulated or washed out on the surface from a great dinosaur bed beneath. A Mexican sheep herder had collected some of these petrified bones for the foundations of his cabin, the first ever built of such strange materials. The excavation of a promising outcrop was almost immediately rewarded by finding a thigh bone nearly six feet in length which sloped downward into the earth, running into the lower leg and finally into the foot, with all the respective parts lying in the natural positions as in life. This proved to be the previously unknown hind limb of the great dinosaur Diplodocus. In this manner the "Bone-Cabin Quarry" was discovered and christened.

As a Beginning.

"Let me see," said the editor to a new acquisition, a graduate fresh from college. "I hardly know what to put you at."

"Until you decide," replied the man, "I'll be glad to write a few leading articles."—Smith's Weekly.
